A SECOND police investigation has been launched into claims of historical abuse at the private St Aloysius College, in Glasgow. The probe follows a similar investigation three years ago, and follows allegations raised by a former student, who now lives in Canada. the second police crackdown on sexual abuse at St Aloysius' College in Glasgow has taken place Legal action has also begun over separate allegations of physical and sexual abuse which are said to take place at Jesuit schools worth £13,455 a year. Detective Detective interviewed former staff over historical harassment complaints made in 2017 but, while not ruling out criminality, could not corroborate the claims. In one case, a former student has told how she suffered physical and sexual abuse at the hands of lay and Jesuit staff members in the 1960s. Another former student claims she was physically abused in St Aloysius, also in the 1960s. The third case outlines details of physical and sexual abuse said to have been suffered by pupils at the school in the 1970s and 80s. One former student, who is now in her 60s, said she suffered two-and-a-half years of sexual abuse by two Jesuit priests in college. A couple who were found dead in a Coatbridge flat as police investigated five suspected drug deaths in 24 hours He also said he was subjected to physical abuse by another priest and a lay teacher. The 2017 police investigation emerged from claims that it is now subject to civil action. The former pupil said: 'The school was horrendous and ruined my life. I was in my 40s before seeking help and have seen a psychiatrist and clinical psychologist ever since. The police investigation is similar to the one launched three years ago Daniel Canning, a lawyer with Thompsons Solicitors, which represents former pupils, said dozens of supporting witnesses had come forward with details of the abuse. He said: 'We are investigating all allegations of abuse and encourage anyone affected to contact us. St. Aloysius and the Jesuit order said they could not comment. Mater song Carmen AloisianumPublic Publishing EagleColoursMyrtle and gold 9NicknameAloysiansWebsitewww.staloyusius.org St Aloysius' College is a Jesuit school that pays selective, independent fees, in Glasgow, Glasgow. It was founded in 1859 by the Jesuits, formerly college staff, and named saint Aloysius Gonzaga. The strong Jesuit ethos emphasizes the practice of the Roman Catholic faith both in the church and in the community, with many charitable and community-based groups in schools even though there are no Jesuits now in school. St. Aloysius' College is an educational school along with kindergarten, junior high school, and high school. There are four houses: Aloysius Gonzaga, Ignatius of Loyola, John Ogilvie and Francis Xavier, named after Jesuit saints. The college motto is Ad majora natus sum, which means I was born for bigger things. As in many Jesuit schools, pupils are instructed to write AMDG (Ad Majorem Dei Gloriam – For the greater glory of God) on all work. The school's coat of arms is an eagle, and the College hymn is Carmen Aloisianum. The School History Foundation was founded on 12 September 1859 on Charlotte Street, near Glasgow Green, in the East End of Glasgow. Here lives a mostly migrant Catholic community from Ireland and the Scottish Highlands, both of which groups of schools are meant to serve. Since 1866 the College's main campus has been located in Garnethill on the north side of Glasgow city centre, adjacent to the Glasgow School of Art. In 1979 the admissions policy was changed by the Governor during the tenure of Principal Fr. Henry Anthony Richmond SJ and girls were accepted. [1] Girls now make up half of the school population. The church of St. Aloysius next door, associated with the College Building includes the original B-category Listed Italian Chandlery Building, including administrative blocks, libraries, and refectory. The 1908 and 1926 extensions are known collectively as The Hanson Building, which accommodates classrooms for language and the humanities as well as school chapels and gymnasiums. The Mount Building, which originally housed the city's first Royal Hospital for Sick Children from 1882, and until recently housed a junior high school (whose patron is St John Ogilvie), today has music, art and drama, and a kindergarten. More modern additions include the Clavius Building which has a faculty of Mathematics, Science and Technology and a Junior High School Building, both of which have won riba architecture awards,[2] and have been identified as one of the best modern Scottish buildings. In 2011, the number of buildings and the size of the campus increased with the acquisition of the Mercy Convent site and building. The building is used for additional support lessons, as well as a gym for students, offices and staff rooms. [1] The school has close links to the Jesuit parish church of St Aloysius next door. The church is regularly used by colleges and the Masses offered for schools and seniors. [3] The building is listed category A, designed by C. J. Menart in the style of baroque revival and modeled on the Church Gesù, the original Jesuit headquarters in Rome. [4] A Sports Hall was recently built on the College campus, and is open for use from August 2017. [5] The school's main sports ground is in the city's north-eastern suburbs of Millerston. The kindergarten is located in the Mount Building, while junior school is in a modern building along Hill Street. In addition to attending lessons in Junior High school, students will also receive preparation for the sacrament of Reconciliation, Confirmation and First Holy Communion as part of the school's triple tuition fees for their academic, social, and spiritual lives. [7] House System houses were founded by principal Fr. Adrian J Porter SJ in 1997. The four houses, named after the famous Jesuit saints, compete against each other in events including rugby, hockey, athletics, inter-home debates and quizzes. Each house also has a housemaster and colors: Aloysius Gonzaga: Blue Ignatius Loyola : Red John Ogilvie: Green Francis Xavier: Gold Under headmaster John E. Stoer, the home system was replaced with a system of years, except for sports and chess. This means that instead of each house having its own housekeeper, each year will have its Head of Year and Deputy Head of Year. Previously pupils were divided into 'Romans' and 'Carthaginians' with 'victory' given to pupils for good work. This totals at the end of the academic year and is overall awarded to the house with the most wins. In 2016, there was no more Campion House, and instead Gonzaga, named after the school's patron saint. The Aloysius Athletics rugby team won the Scottish U16 Rugby School Cup Final in 2016.
